PARTNERSHIPS PROMOTE GOOD HEALTH

The Florida Department of Health in St. Lucie provides thousands of services to our residents annually. However, public health emphasis is on the overall health of entire populations. The theme for National Public Health Week, "PUBLIC HEALTH: START HERE" is especially appropriate.

Every year I ask myself, "What can we do to improve the health of our community?" I am very proud of the dramatic reduction in HIV infection rates, teen pregnancies and infant mortality, as well as programs which promote maternal health, school health and children's oral health.

But let me stress that we don't do this alone! Many organizations and individuals in the "public health system", working to improve the quality of life in our community, make this progress possible. Indeed, a record $ 8,619,219 in donated services and supplies by healthcare professionals, citizens and businesses were reported for St. Lucie County in 2013.

Our primary focus is shifting toward identifying and eliminating root causes of preventable illness and injury. Much of what influences our health happens outside the doctor's office – in our homes, schools and workplaces. What we eat, how active we are and other personal behaviors like tobacco, alcohol and drugs use can put our health at serious risk. Tobacco use alone kills hundreds of thousands annually and costs the economy in the hundreds of billions. We work closely with our partners to fight "Big Tobacco's" efforts to addict new victims.

Outside factors, such as education levels and socioeconomic status, have a profound influence on people's ability to access healthcare and healthy food. Stress levels and indicators like violent crime rates are key predictors of community health. In St. Lucie, we are working together to assure greater health equity for all, which helps improve the county's overall health.

The built environment also influences our health outcomes. Pollution-free air and water, access to recreation opportunities and the ability to purchase safe, healthy food are part of this effort. Investing in bike trails, sidewalks and public transportation encourages active lifestyles and helps prevent injuries. Safe, clean and affordable housing impacts the health of our children and their ability to learn. Poor housing is also linked to elevated blood lead levels, asthma and bronchitis.

Public health starts here. Most of our years of increased life expectancy can be attributed to public health achievements. We work to find solutions to our problems. Our work continues.

WE ARE WINNING THE BATTLE AGAINST HIV!

HIV/AIDS IS EVERYONE'S BUSINESS

St. Lucie is now the lead agency for Area 15 HIV/AIDS Ryan White Part B patient care, managing an annual budget of $ 2,271,241. The department provides service delivery, financial and administrative oversight; monitors subcontracts and drafts funding requests; and implements community assessments to support Area 15 Consortia.

INJURY PREVENTION

"Restoring the Village"

Dr. LaQuandra Nesbitt, MD, PhD, Director Louisville, Kentucky Metro Dept. of Public Health & Wellness (photo far left) was invited by the health department to speak to community leaders about Louisville's public health approach to address community violence. A local movement coined "Restoring the Village" by Representative Larry Lee Jr., was created to reduce the violence by addressing the root causes that undermine the health and safety of our youth.

County Commissioner Kim Johnson and Health Department Assistant Director Clint Sperber (photo far right) listen intently as Nesbitt explains Louisville's plan. Unintentional injury is the leading cause of death for children in St. Lucie. A community taskforce is beginning to address the social determinants that impact child safety issues.

PUBLIC HEALTH PREPAREDNESS

Preparedness is a continuous cycle of planning, training, exercising and evaluating progress through successful partnerships between government and non-government agencies and the citizens of St. Lucie County.

REMEMBERING OUR HERO

SYLVIE KRAMER MARCEAU

Leaves Lasting Legacy—During her tenure in St. Lucie County (SLC), Sylvie successfully advocated and championed better prenatal care; decreased teen births; improved pregnancy outcomes; reduced prenatal HIV transmission to ZERO; and saved St. Lucie County millions of dollars. Sylvie was selected as the county's first Public Health Hero.
